- Since 2011, immigrants have enhanced two thirds of economic growth and have founded 30 percent of US firms which formed 50 percent of startups that are valued over 1 billion.
- Immigrants entering the labor force increase productivity in the economy and raise the GDP. This is a major benefit as it creates a “immigration surplus” which means immigrants income rises as well as the incomes of the native population.
- It has been proven that native born citizens engage in more criminal behavior than immigrants. Studies shows that states with higher populations of immigrants have lower crime rates than states with lower populations of immigrants.
- This rise in skilled immigrants into this country is linked with greater innovation which according to economists generates economic growth. This increase in innovation generated by these skilled immigrants generates economic productivity which benefits natives due to this innovation and economic growth
